What We Need

There is a strange near silence on the Democratic side of the current election campaign regarding the destabilization of the Earth's atmosphere or for that matter the destabilization of the whole Earth. The increasingly fierce tides, rising seas, floods, earthquakes and winds of change (forecast by PROJECT EARTH for more than a quarter of a century) are bearing down upon us.

We actually need to implement the long withheld solutions of zero point vacuum fluctuation and hydro-oxy gas based technologies. We need to cast aside the jargon of mediocre candidates and the band-aids of 1970's variety technologies.

The same corporate oligarchy, which has laid waste to so much of our world would rather not accurately report all the fires, floods, tornadoes, hurricanes or all the cities and towns ruined by weather exacerbated by climate change. As too many of us know, these disasters are increasingly ubiquitous and cannot be denied.

The corporate boys would rather change the subject to the economy instead but alas they have destroyed that too. We the People can't ignore the news about the environment or it's stepchild, the economy. Every week another town is laid to waste, another factory is closed, another ten thousand mortgages are foreclosed, another bridge to the future collapsed.

There were tornadoes in January again this year. There will be more in February and March and on and on... The firestorms in Southern California have been replaced by flooding. Over twenty feet of snow has fallen in the Mountains of Colorado this year until there is no place left to put it.. The Pacific Northwest has spent weeks and now months fighting flood after flood and snowstorm after snowstorm. The Hawaiian Islands are being repeatedly flooded by un-named storms. Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas and parts of Texas have been shut down for weeks at a time by ice and wind and an inadequate infrastructure.

In the weeks and months and years to come more and more of our homes will be reduced to rubble and so will our neighbors' homes down the street. Many of us have now seen first hand how ill prepared our Federal, State and local governments are for the systemic breakdown of global environmental stability, which the global corporatocracy has created. Project Earth has said for nearly thirty years now, "When the environment of the Earth is bankrupt we will all be homeless. There will be countless environmental refugees and fewer and fewer refuges."

It seems redundant to continue to say this. Then suddenly one day Global Climate Destabilization comes to your town and you find that you don't have water to drink or to clean with (or to flush your toilets with) and the lights are out and you have no heat or food. So pardon me for continuing to bring up this sore point again and again but none of this was necessary.

There have been solutions available since Tesla. The problem is that all of the real solutions have been systematically kept from us by compromising politicians and politically correct "scientists" who, drunk with a false elitism, fear that their corporate constituents/handlers would replace their sorry asses with new ones if they ever actually told the truth.

Such a man is Barack Obama. His campaign ignores the Emergency on Earth. It is strange that so many naïve souls seem to think that Barack Obama is imbued with some messianic mantle of authority. Unfortunately, a careful examination of his record reveals that Barack is large on rhetoric but low on substance.

When I hear the starry eyed members of the Barack Obama cult singing the jingoistic refrains of their new belief system, I have to say something. I have to point out that their idol is the same Senator Obama who bragged about a "Bill" he introduced to "protect" his Illinois constituents from unreported leaks of nuclear waste from several nuclear reactors in that state. The problem with his story is that he allowed this "Bill" to become meaningless drivel and even then it didn't pass. Even so, Mr. Obama implied to voters in Iowa and by proxy all other voters in our nation that this "bill" did pass and that it had teeth. Curiouser and Curiouser!

President George W. Bush and seven of his administration's top officials, including Vice President Dick Cheney, National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice, and Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, made at least 935 false statements in the two years following September 11, 2001, about the national security threat posed by Saddam Hussein's Iraq.

As much as Mr. Obama wishes to paint himself as a legendary legislative super-hero, the story is just another fake cartoon scene out of the Barrack Odrama. The truth is that the political Trojan horse named Barack Obama submitted himself and his legislation to his corporate contributors and handlers at Excelon, who had leaked their nuclear waste into the Illinois water table along with their copious contributions to his campaigns.

Let's see, there does seem be a pattern here. I wish it were not so. I too was once so taken with this candidate that I actually sent out an email to many of you introducing him as a bright new hope. I was wrong.

I truly believe that Barack Obama is the cleverest of all the Trojan horse candidates ever fielded in our nation's history. At least he seems clever until you get down to the radioactive the ground water beneath his feet.

We do not need to follow a false prophet into a growing wasteland of unfulfilled promises. We have had enough lies to kill a planet. We don't need more false hope based on political hype.

We actually need to implement the long withheld solutions of zero point vacuum fluctuation and hydro-oxy gas based technologies. We need to cast aside the jargon of mediocre candidates and the band-aids of 1970's variety technologies.

We need to act like loving, intelligent beings. We have to be politically, physically and even spiritually assertive. If we do this, we can send a message to the rest of the universe that there is intelligent life on Earth. Perhaps we can even attract the help of more intelligent beings whose presence frequently leaks across the corporate firewall of denial and into our living rooms. When we will we have leadership that stops lying about the fact that we live in a universe in which much more advanced and intelligent life forms exist than the politicians who usurp our attention on the evening news.

Whether Hillary Clinton, Barack Obama or John McCain is the next President, the United States Government has no right to deny the citizens of our country or the rest of the world the benefit of very advanced and pollution free energy technologies, which have been developed at our expense but never used for our collective good. I know that these technologies exist because I have actually, physically invented, developed and worked with them. By grace, I have survived long enough to tell you about and even physically demonstrate several technologies before representatives of the corruption confiscated them.

Right now, we are in an emergency and we cannot afford for our government to withhold the truth about climate destabilization, zero point technologies or more intelligent life forms any longer.

Through our carelessness, we have created a world of extremes, a world of fire and ice, of deluge and drought. We have created a world of imbalance. We need to bring this world back into balance. We need to start now. Charismatic leaders who say one thing and then do another just won't cut it in the twenty first century and that is all there is to it.
